The SCUBAPRO Fusion Drysuit

When it comes to Drysuits most think there are only 2 types, neoprene and bag suits. Image if you could combine the best of both worlds? SCUBAPRO have done just that! The all new hybrid SCUBAPRO FUSION blends a super stretchable durable neoprene outer and a rugged bi-laminate interior Core to form the DryCORE. So how does DryCORE work?

The inner layer is a tough bi-laminate 200D latex which can accommodate a huge range of body shapes and yet feels perfectly comfortable all of the time. The outer layer is a 1.5mm super-stretch neoprene which allows keeps the inner layer protected and maintains the freedom to be as flexible as you can. The combination of the 2 layers also means there is 10% less air inside which reduces the amount of lead you need and better stabilisation. The DryCore doesn't pinch and can be donned in under 2 minutes!

The SCUBAPRO FUSION is also extremely low profile in the water and has hidden leg pockets. Flexible socks have been added and Si-Tech® balanced valves, but features new latex seals with wrist seal cuffs for added protection and comfort. This Drysuit really needs to be tried on to experience the supreme fit and flexibility and you don't have to allow for large undergarments as the suit will maintain minimal interior volume automatically.

The new SCUBAPRO Vancouver undergarment is a heavy weight fleece jump suit. Under garment made from Tactel®, Tactel® is said to dry eight times faster than cotton and is at least twice as soft as most other fibers. Too top it off the whole suit stuffs into a small bag for easy transport and storage.
